Central Auditory Processing Assessment

Referring to Australian Hearing for Central Auditory Processing Assessment

Australian Hearing provides a service which diagnoses, manages and remediates Central Auditory Processing Disorder (CAPD) at selected Australian Hearing Centres.

A number of central auditory processing tests can be used to assess CAPD. At Australian Hearing, we focus on identifying auditory deficits that are likely to lead to listening difficulties and poorer performance in the classroom.

We aim to tailor our tests to suit the individual child and, as such, what is included in each assessment may differ slightly between children. If a child is found to have difficulty in an area of auditory processing, we will then discuss management and auditory training options available.
